¿Es demasiado pronto para bromear sobre Pearl Harbor? Presidente Trump no lo cree así.

El comandante en jefe celebró el jueves una conferencia de prensa en la Oficina Oval junto con el Primer Ministro de Japón, Sanae Takaichi, que se transmitió Noticias NBC, TRAMO y varios otros canales. El primero Aprendizaje star respondió una pregunta sobre por qué Estados Unidos no alertó a sus aliados sobre sus primeros ataques contra Irán.

"Una cosa, no quieres hacer demasiadas señales, ¿sabes?" Trump respondió. "Cuando entramos, entramos muy duro. Y no se lo contamos a nadie porque queríamos sorpresa."

Luego, el presidente comparó los ataques no anunciados con uno de los momentos más infames de la Segunda Guerra Mundial.

"¿Quién sabe mejor sobre la sorpresa de Japón?" bromed. "¿Por qué no me hablaste de Pearl Harbor, está bien?"

Y añadió: "Crees en la sorpresa, creo que mucho más que nosotros".

Trump continuó explicando por qué prioriza el elemento sorpresa.

"Tuvimos que sorprenderlos y lo hicimos", dijo. "Y debido a esa sorpresa, los primeros dos días, probablemente eliminamos el 50 por ciento de lo que estábamos haciendo, y mucho más de lo que esperábamos. Entonces si voy a contárselo a todo el mundo ya no es una sorpresa, ¿verdad?"

Los representantes de la Casa Blanca y de la oficina del Primer Ministro de Japón no respondieron de inmediato Entretenimiento semana solicitud de comentario.

El presentador de CNN Jake Tapper intervino sobre los comentarios de Trump en las redes sociales. "El primer ministro de la FWIW, Takaichi, nació 20 años después de Pearl Harbor", dijo escribió on X. (Trump nació cinco años después de Pearl Harbor)

También el politólogo y autor Ian Bremmer compartió sus pensamientos. "No tenía la referencia de Pearl Harbor mientras estaba sentado con el primer ministro japonés en mi cartón de bingo", escribió on X. "En retrospectiva, considero que esto es un fracaso personal"
